

Susan Viets adds from Budapest: Twenty thousand Hungarian workers, organised by the official trades union, have finally broken a year's silence and marched in the streets in angry protest against the Communist Party and against price rises, which they say are forcing them into abject poverty.

Reproduced with permission from the Guardian

30 January 1990